Little Activity In Police Court

Judge Bob McCutcheon reported today that little activity occurred over the weekend with no drunks being brought in. A drive is on to cut excessive noise by motorists and to reduce speeding within the city limits.

Judge McCutcheon said that the 25 mile per hour speed limits on Sycamore is being observed and that fines are being paid by motorists who fail to do so. Sycamore has become a speedway since it is one of the main streets leading into town from the south. Motorists have failed to cut their speed as they entered the city, making the residential street a danger to pedestrians and motorists alike.

NO ARRESTS

Sheriff Brigham Futrell said that his office made several calls over the weekend, but that no arrests were made. Most of the calls were for information or other minor incidents, he said.

Unidentified Object Hits Plane Sunday

BAKERSFIELD, Calif., July 23 — Air Force officials today examined a damaged two-engine Air Force transport which was hit by an unidentified object over Pixley, Calif.

More than half of the plane's left elevator control surface was torn away Sunday as the C-130B transport flew at 16,000 feet in clear weather.

Major M. M. Stevens, pilot of the plane, said he heard a loud "bang" and felt a severe vibration as the craft nosed down in a vertical dive.

After gaining partial control of the transport at 7,000 feet, Stevens said he radioed Kern County Airport that he was coming in for an emergency landing. Three other crewmen were aboard.

One official said it appeared as if "something had struck the plane from above." The transport was on a flight from Hamilton Air Force Base, near San Francisco, to San Antonio, Tex.

Steel Talks Will Be Resumed Tuesday

By J. ROBERT SHUBERT
United Press Staff Correspondent

PITTSBURGH, July 23 — Steel strike negotiators picked up their own ball Sunday and agreed to resume bogged-down contract talks to end a 23-day industry-wide walkout.

Bargainers for the steel industry and representatives of 650,000 striking U. S. and Canadian workers agreed to meet in New York City Tuesday. They had broken off negotiations here Saturday.

John A. Stephens, U. S. Steel Corp. vice president and chief industry spokesman, and USW president David J. McDonald agreed to meet in an informal telephone conversation Sunday.

U. S. Mediation Director Joseph F. Finnegan said in Washington the government had "nothing at all to do with the revitalized talks. But Finnegan and other top federal officials hailed the new meetings and expressed hope that a "mutually satisfactory agreement" would be reached quickly.

An Inflationary Spiral? Shortly before both sides agreed to resume discussions, the union released its answer to a company charge that a big wage increase for millworkers would touch off another "inflationary spiral." The USW said pricing policies of the steel industry were tendencies in the national economy.

Stephens took the initiative in arranging the New York talks. He telephoned McDonald Sunday afternoon and the two agreed to meet. McDonald then cancelled his flight to Chicago, where he was to begin a week's tour of USW picket lines at steel plants in the Midwest and East.

Finnegan viewed the resumption of negotiations as "a most encouraging sign." He said he played no part in getting the talks started again and would not take an active role "unless requested to do so by the parties or events indicate the advisability of so doing."

"This was accomplished voluntarily by the parties concerned, and we are most encouraged," he said. "Let people settle their differences privately... that is the Eisenhower plan."

RUSSIA A MENACE

WASHINGTON, July 23 — FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover said Sunday Russian President Klement Voroshilov once boasted of engineering the slaughter of 11,000 Czarist officers and shipping their wives and daughters to Red army brothels.

Hoover said Voroshilov's action proves present Soviet rulers are men of "no character." He said it showed that, in spite of the recent Russian "campaign of smiles," the Communist Party continues to be "one of the most serious menaces" to the United States.

In what was billed as Hoover's "first appearance on a television news program," he was interviewed by Rep. Kenneth B. Keating (R-NY) on a filmed presentation for six upstate New York stations.

Stevenson Has Good Chance On First Ballot Said

WASHINGTON, July 23 — Two Senate supporters of Adlai E. Stevenson said today that Stevenson has a good chance of winning the Democratic presidential nomination on the first ballot.

This belief was expressed by Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney (D-Kan.), chairman of Stevenson's Speakers Bureau four years ago, and Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D-NM).

In order to win nomination, a Democratic candidate must have 686½ convention votes. The latest United Press tabulation shows that Stevenson, as of today, has a known-first-ballot strength of 411 votes, compared with 149½ for Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn.) and 139½ for New York Gov. Averell Harriman.

Monroney predicted, however, that by the time the Democratic convention opens in Chicago Aug. 13, Stevenson will have between 550 and 600 votes firmly pledged for first-ballot support. He said there is the "strongest possibility" that as Stevenson's strength begins to show on the first ballot, delegations committed to favorite sons will begin switching to him and give him immediate nomination.

Anderson linked his prediction to Stevenson's "enthusiastic" reception at last week's Washington dinner honoring Sen. Walter F. George (D-Ga.), retiring "dean" of the Senate. Most of the Democratic Party's top brass was present.

"I think the dinner, and the widespread enthusiasm shown for Mr. Stevenson, indicates that he is now likely to be nominated on the first ballot," Anderson said.

Seek To Ram Civil Rights Bill Through

By WILLIAM M. BATES
United Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, July 23 — Republicans and northern Democrats were set to ram the Eisenhower administration's Civil Rights Bill to final approval in the House today over stubborn southern opposition.

But the measure will go to a pigeonhole in the Senate and barring a major and unexpected development — will die there. The rush for congressional adjournment by this weekend and the threat of a southern filibuster expected to keep the Senate from acting on the bill.

A final vote in the House was the first order of business when the lower chamber met this morning. The four-point measure was tentatively approved on a voice vote Friday.

Section 21 Majority Supporters of the Civil Rights Bill predicted overwhelming approval. Rep. Kenneth B. Keating (R-NY), the bill's GOP sponsor, foresees a two-to-one majority for it.

Southerners conceded they could not prevent house passage. But they contended their "baby filibuster," which kept the measure before the House for a week and a day, killed the bill this session by ruling out any chance of Senate action.

Four Point Measure The measure generally followed the recommendations laid down by the Eisenhower administration. The bill would:

1. Create a bi-partisan commission of six members to investigate alleged civil rights violations, including "unwarranted economic pressures" because of color, religion or nationality.

2. Establish a new division within the Department of Justice under an assistant attorney general to handle civil rights cases.

3. Authorize the attorney general to bring civil suits directly in federal courts to protect citizens' rights.

4. Strengthen existing federal laws on the right to vote by authorizing the attorney general to bring damage suits to protect this right.

United Press To Cover Convention

NEW YORK, July 23 — Fifty United Press political reporters and feature writers will go by air to Chicago and San Francisco to cover the coming Democratic and Republican national conventions.

They will be backed up by a corps of resident writers, editors, telegraphers, and copy boys and messengers. Most of the out-of-town contingent will come from U. P.'s Washington bureau. Others have been assigned from New York and other states with favorable son candidates or large convention delegations.

The special bureaus will be established in each convention city. For the Democratic meeting these will be at the Hilton Hotel and at the Amphitheater; for the Republican at the Fairmont Hotel and the Cow Palace. They will be linked by leased wires and telephones to the local United Press bureaus and to other key news spots nearby. All four special bureaus will be joined to the United Press national leased wire network assuring all clients instantaneous delivery of convention news wherever it breaks.

On the scene to supervise U. P.'s news-gathering operations, will be Frank H. Bartholomew, president; Earl J. Johnson, vice-president and general news manager; and Harry Ferguson, executive editor. In direct charge of the convention staffs will be Julius Frandsen, U. P.'s Washington news editor.

Among the writers is U. P.'s Washington Manager Lyle C. Wilcox, whose direct knowledge of the national capital dates from 1927 and whose experience with national conventions goes back even further, to the 1924 Democratic convention in Madison Square Garden in New York. This year's National conventions will be the eighth series. Wilson has reported. He will write daily what-does-it-mean pieces, special dispatches pointing to the significance of developments as they occur. The main lead story for afternoon papers will be by Raymond Lahar, for 19 years chief of U. P.'s Senate staff. The corresponding assignment for morning papers will be handled by Robert Barkoll, chief political writer for the United Press night wire.

Watches Murder Of Woman Through Glasses

CHICAGO, July 23 — A hospital superintendent said he watched helplessly through field glasses while a killer stalked a woman bather Sunday at a Chicago beach.

Dr. Arthur Kirk Besley, 55, superintendent of the Norwegian-American Hospital, said he watched from his apartment as the man stalked his victim on a North Side beach, where she was sunning herself.

Besley said the man crouched behind a clump of bushes, changing his position each time the woman moved. He peered through the glasses in horror as the man jumped from the bushes, threw a shirt over the woman's head and began beating her.

The doctor ran from his apartment and raced to the beach in his auto. He picked up a policeman on the way but they arrived too late to find the woman's body in the bushes from which the killer had sprung.

Police estimated the woman was in her late 30's. They said her shorts had been ripped off and the rest of her clothing was disarranged.

A book found near her body contained a marker on which was inscribed, "a prayer for a happy life."

Recruit Did Not Take Order Seriously Testifies In Trial

By H. D. QUIGG

PARRIS ISLAND, S. C., July 23 — A recruit who went on a Marine training "death march" testified today that he did not take seriously Staff Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon's threat that non-swimmers in the ill-fated outfit would be eaten by sharks.

"I took it as rather a joke," Pvt. Melvin Barber, 18, a New York city Negro, said as the second week of the McKeon court martial trial opened with Barber being cross-examined by defense attorney Emilie Zola Berman.

McKeon led recruit Platoon 71 into the tidal water of Ribbon Creek at this Marine recruit training depot last April 8 to "teach them discipline." Six recruits were drowned.

Barber testified that as McKeon led the platoon through the grass toward Ribbon Creek on the moonless night of April 8 he warned the outfit that those who couldn't swim would drown and those who could would be eaten by sharks.

Clarifies Statement He was asked to repeat that statement today because in earlier testimony he had gotten his words mixed up, saying that those who could swim would drown.

In any event, he emphasized, although he was a non-swimmer, he was not scared about the possibility of sharks in Ribbon Creek.

The defense had contended that Platoon 71 was a "laggard" outfit seriously.

The platoon panicked and six trainees were drowned. McKeon is charged with involuntary manslaughter, oppressing troops, and two counts of drinking in violation of regulations.

Defense Claims Oppression The defense contends McKeon himself now is being oppressed by the Marine brass for an act of training which had been standard practice at this recruit depot, even though not on the books. Those practices, it argues, have given the Marine Corps the tough fibre and morale that have built its proud battle record and tradition.

Barber was the 12th government witness in its attempt to send McKeon, a 31-year old drill instructor from Worcester, Mass., to prison for up to six years and three months. It has at least 25 more witnesses and expects to take the rest of this week for its case.

But for the defense, attorney Emilie Zola Berman announced he would not agree to any limit on the number of his witnesses on the issue he regards as paramount — marching 84 recruits into "boondocks."

The trial counsel prosecutor who is responsible for calling all witnesses on both sides has not, according to Berman, issued subpoenas for 15 persons, which the defense named him last week.

Wants Witnesses Limited The trial counsel, Marine Maj. Charles B. Sevier, intends to ask that the names of the witnesses be limited.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

All sorts of explanations will be forthcoming on what caused Ringling Brothers and Barnum Bailey circus to cancel its program in the middle of the season and head for winter quarters at Sarasota, Florida.

The lawyer for the "largest show on earth" says it paid its bill on all money, as is true of all other circus organizations, because of envy, jealousy and the effort to tamper competition. He considered more important than the circus's loss of business.

The circus, many say, is nothing of the sort. It says the show has been forced to close because of labor trouble, and it is uncertain that it will be able to ever again unless a permanent agreement can be reached so the circus can tell at the beginning of the season what it will have to pay as high throughout the annual tour.

Whatever the reason for the passing of the circus is something that should cause a great deal of concern because it is an American institution. Maybe it is time for it to fold up. Maybe children and grown-ups like television better.

But in trying to find the cause the claims of the management are given added strength by the announcement this week that the Metropolitan Opera Company has canceled its plans for performing a season because of the loss of the art of the opera, and because there is less interest in the opera. It says some of the best performers have radio and television contracts that pay them more than they get on the stage.

The passing of these two great American institutions may mark another step in progress, but there are many people who will miss them. They are as American as baseball and apple pie.

ALUMINUM FOR COTTON BALE TIES

The first carload shipment of aluminum strips has gone forward to the Southern Sash and Sals Company of Birmingham, Alabama, for use in fabricating ties for cotton bales to replace steel ties which have been cut off because of a strike.

In recent years the steel industry has invested millions of dollars in developing how steel can do many more jobs than iron and other metal, but the strike may curtail that in the cotton industry. The aluminum may be a good substitute for steel, but it does the steel industry a great deal of business. It uses the steel industry's steel to make a volume of 20,000 tons of steel used each year in cotton bale ties.

The steel industry won't like to lose this volume, but since we need the steel we can get, and since the industry has been making more than $100 million for ten years, maybe we will be better off to find substitutes for steel.

Early Wynn pitched a six-hitter for his 11th win as the Cleveland Indians beat the Baltimore Orioles, 8-0. Vic Wertz led Cleveland's 17-hit attack with his 23rd homer and two singles. It was Cleveland's 11th win over Baltimore in 13 meetings.

Less Moss hit two homers and Minnie Minoso another as the Chicago White Sox beat the Washington Senators, 6-1. Behind Jack Harshman's five-hitter, Eddie Yost's homer deprived Harshman of a shutout.

Mickey Vernon drove in five runs with a homer and a single to lead the Boston Red Sox to an 8-6 decision over the Detroit Tigers. Tom Brewer won his 13th game although tagged for 13 hits, including a three-run homer by Frank House.

No Sudden Troop Cuts Says Eden

LONDON, July 23 — Prime Minister Sir Anthony Eden reassured British Western defense partners today he plans no "sudden or abrupt" troop cuts "which would throw the whole gear of our Western unity into confusion."

But Eden warned that the H-bomb, which he said Britain will possess "before long," must "compel some military rethinking on both sides of the Iron Curtain."

He indicated a slow approach to rethinking in a House of Commons speech just four hours after West Germany's ambassador to London delivered an official warning against cutting Western forces on the continent.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer pulled his Big Three ambassadors home to Bonn last week for emergency talks on the situation. There have been reports that Britain and the United States were contemplating major cutbacks in their forces in West Germany.

London Ambassador Hans von Herwarth relayed Adenauer's concern to Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd as soon as he returned from Bonn this morning.

Eden gave the answer shortly afterwards.

"It is surely clear that the possession of this weapon (the H-bomb) by the two major powers in the world, and before long by ourselves also, will compel some military rethinking on both sides of the Iron Curtain," Eden said.

"What we seek is a reappraisal of the strategic needs of today with our allies and within our alliances."

"Our policy remains firmly based on the closest possible relations with the 'commonwealth' with the United States and with Western Europe."

Greatest Golfers Come From Memphis

SAN FRANCISCO — The greatest golfers in the world come from the city of Memphis, Tenn. That was proved again over the past week when the stars from that city made a clean sweep in the National Public Links Golf Tournament.

Look what Memphis can point to with pride:

The national public links champion—little Junior Buxbaum.

The runner-up for the same title—Bill Southworth, a Navy man stationed in Jacksonville, Fla.

The National Open champion—Dr. Cary Middlecott.

The national city team title—won her by Buxbaum, Gene Chase and Eddie Langert.

Buxbaum, of course, is the current hero. A 37-year old, 138-pounder, he waded through 176 holes of competitive golf in six days—shooting 36 holes the last four days in a row to win the title.

IS A THIRD WORLD BLOC IN THE MAKING HERE?

'Big Top' Finale Recalls These Nostalgic Scenes

FINAL PERFORMANCE in Pittsburgh of the biggest "Big Top," Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Combined Shows, recalls these scenes of circus days of old. There's the parade, the multi-ton "Big Top" spread out ready to be raised, the gaudy entrance and the elephants performing. Henceforth you'll have to see the circus in a canvasless arena. ENCHANTED HARBOR
By DOROTHY WORLEY

CHAPTER 14

“PETER CRAIG stopped in the doorway of Maud’s, a hand on Peggy’s arm. His voice was low. “Do you see what I see?” Noting the storm gathering on her face, he said quickly, “Now be your age, Peggy. Pomeroy. And I’ll remind you again that Apalachicola means ‘friendly people.’”

“Well, whether you do or not, Dick is motioning for us to come over, and we’ll have to go.”

“I don’t care anything about meeting those girls. I think it’s absurd, Dick and Bill Duval being here with them.”

“Nothing about it, but there’s nothing wrong with those girls.” Pete’s voice was a little short. “You can hold your own with them, can’t you?”

Peggy could. Peggy looked pretty cute in that frouny skirt and tight little sweater, her straw-colored hair parted in the middle with buns over her ears. Quaint, but cute. Peggy liked to be different. She had never cut her hair. Pete thought, She’s in a class by herself, not one of a pattern. He teased, “Come on, Peggy. Be a sport.”

Introductions were made and Peggy and Pete were invited to join the others. Peggy wasn’t particularly friendly, and after a few minutes she said vaguely that they were meeting some people.

When she and Pete had gone on to another table, Priscilla said, “Aren’t Southern people supposed to be more friendly? The atmosphere when she was here seemed a little chilly.”

Bill met her eyes. “Usually they are. Especially Apalachicola people. Maybe you’re trespassing tonight.”

“Trespassing?” Priscilla repeated, surprised. Then, seeing Bill’s eyes go to Dick Devereaux, she understood. She laughed lightly. “I was afraid of something like that. Doctors are always so popular.”

Dick shrugged. “Don’t pay any attention to Bill, Priscilla. Peggy has that distant manner at first. She’ll be different next time she sees you.”

Priscilla wondered if Bill Duval was really warning her or teasing, when he said, “It seems to be a toss-up between Doc here and that fellow she’s with tonight. I haven’t been here long, but I see her with Doc one night, Pete the next.”

“Thanks for telling me. I’ll have to see that she doesn’t see me with Dr. Devereaux again. I wouldn’t want to jeopardize my chances since I won’t be here long.”

“How long?” Dick asked, looking at her intently.

Before Priscilla could answer, Rita surprised her by saying, “She doesn’t really know. She came along to please me and I don’t know how long we’ll stay.”

“Seems too bad to break up the party,” Dick said, as he motioned for the waitress to bring the check.

“We’d better go home and go right to bed,” said Priscilla. “We haven’t had much sleep lately.”

Dick surprised them all, himself the most, by saying, “I’ll stand luck, then, but I hope we can all get together again soon.” And to Priscilla, “May I call you?”

Priscilla smiled. “At the risk of getting in bed with the girl friend? Remember I’m just transient.”

Bill looked at her. “Might be a good thing to give Peggy some competition.”

Priscilla looked at him, looked back at Dick, and said lightly, “O.K. If I can be accommodating, I’ll be on the doctor’s side.”

“I’ll call them,” Dick said, “very soon.”

As the two girls drove onto the highway a few minutes later, they saw a long black convertible come out of the shadows and turn in behind them.

Bill and Dick, who were sitting chatting in Dick’s car, noticed the car, too.

“Again, see what I mean?” Bill tossed away his cigarette. “Was Alvarez waiting for them? I haven’t seen him speak to them and yet I can’t rid myself of the feeling that there may be some connection. I ridicule the idea that they’re mixed up with him, and then it creeps in again.”

Dick was silent for a moment, then he said in a slightly troubled voice, “I can’t believe they’re mixed up in anything wrong.”

“I can’t either. And yet I must follow up every possibility. The only thing . . . the dark one fits into my picture. I wish I might tell you more, Dick, but I can’t—at least not yet. As soon as I definitely establish the fact that their being in Apalachicola has no connection with Alvarez, I can cross them off my list.”

“Then it’s Alvarez?”

“I think so. I’m playing a hunch. Proof is what I’m after.”

“Sounds like something big.”

“It is. And I suppose it isn’t fair to ask you to help when you know so little about me.” Bill reached in his pocket, took out a card and handed it to Dick. “I think I can trust you not to mention this to anyone.”

The doctor took the card, snapped open his cigarette lighter and looked at it. He gave a low whistle. “Jumping Jehoshaphat! What can you be looking for in Apalachicola?”

“That’s the part I can’t tell you yet. You’re the only one here who knows this much.” He debated a moment, then he said, “A strange thing happened last night they came.” He told of the girls going up to their room, their lights being out for some time, and then, an hour later, Priscilla coming back downstairs, getting into the car and riding around. He had tailed her. Perhaps that was the reason she hadn’t met anyone, but, instead, had gone back to the hotel. “She drove across the bridge and turned around in front of Maud’s,” he ended.

“Didn’t speak to anyone at all?”

“No. I saw Alvarez riding alone, too, and that made me wonder. And I kept wondering why Priscilla came down alone, and if Miss Lambert had gone out previously without my seeing her.”

“Let me know what you want me to do and I’ll do it, mainly to prove to myself and to you that those girls are on the square. And dating Priscilla is a rather nice assignment. I like that girl.”

“It was quite obvious.”

They drove down Bay Avenue. Everything was quiet. A light burned here and there in houses along the street, but there was no light in the little Glass cottage and no sign of the green Dodge.

“They wanted to come straight home and get to bed early,” Dick remarked.

“Perhaps they just wanted to get rid of us. If I didn’t have to go back by the hospital, I’d ride around with you and see if we could find them.”

“Drop me at the hotel and I’ll get my car and cruise around, anyway.”

At that moment they saw a car turn the corner behind them. It was the black convertible. It seemed to slow a little as it passed Lookout House, then went on.

Natalie Wood Is Grown Up Now

By ALINE MOSBY
United Press Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD — Natalie Wood turns 18 today which in Hollywood sub-deb circles means she's grown up. Her own phone number, cigarettes and swimming pool and no more chaperones.

Nothing makes you feel older than talking to these former child stars who suddenly blossom out to be young ladies. Some, like Margaret O'Brien, have difficulty growing up. Others, like Elizabeth Taylor, are in so much of a hurry they fall into unsuccessful marriages.

But Natalie seems to be like, or almost like, anyway, any college girl.

"I've worked since I was four, always with a chaperone and welfare worker—according to law," explained Natalie as we sat in Haliburton Hamlet, the Romanoff of the younger set.

Can Work Alone
"They trained me every place I went—even to the ladies' room. Now at last I can go to work alone."

Too-clean House Is Scored By Expert

WASHINGTON — One authority on home management is all for letting a little dust collect about the house.

Mrs. Elizabeth Walbert, Crandall, an associate professor of home economics at the University of Rhode Island, said the "perfectionist housekeeper is not necessarily a good manager."

The perfectionist may "overtax her strength and antagonize her entire family by her desire for perfection," Mrs. Crandall told the convention of the American Home Economics Association. "She is frequently a person who has lost sight of the forest for the trees. In management today, the trend is toward rational and flexible standards, rather than perfection."

CALLS DEFEND SGT. MCKEON

Mrs. Elizabeth McKeon (right) heads volunteers manning Parris Island switchboard to receive calls from former Marines.

Sergeant McKeon (left) talks with S/Sgt. Edward A. Huff, senior drill instructor. Huff was off duty. McKeon was in charge, when the drowning tragedy occurred.

CALLS FROM MARINE veterans over the nation offering support for S/Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon's defense in the accidental drowning of six recruits during a night drill were a highlight as McKeon's court martial got into high gear at Parris Island, S. C. One of witnesses was S/Sgt. Edward A. Huff, senior drill instructor, who left McKeon in charge. (International Soundphotos) in that slightly self-conscious way of a beginner. That's part of her life-begins-at-18 plan. She's also installed a swimming pool and her own private telephone at the home where she lives with her parents.

"My sister, Lana Lisa, is 10 and on the phone all the time so I got one of my own," Natalie added with a sigh.

The pretty brunette dumped the frilly, old-fashioned furniture in her room and is redecorating it in modern style. She even invested in an "exchange," an adult Hollywood custom. An "exchange" is a telephone message service so you don't have to give out your private phone number to just anybody.

Wears Slinky Clothes
Natalie also has taken up glamour by hiring a designer to make her some sleek sheath dresses to replace her full-skirted clothes. She hopes to wear the grown-up outfits on her first trip to New York soon. And the slinkiest of all she'll wear to her 18th birthday party. The guests will include Tab, Rusty, Nicky and the other freshmen of Hollywood.

$800,000 Stolen

RESTITUTION "to the full extent of my resources" was promised by Illinois State Auditor Orville E. Hodge (above) as he wearily resigned in an $800,000 scandal that rocked Republican Gov. William G. Strickland and the entire Illinois GOP. Said Hodge, admitting stealing a large part of the money, "I don't know why I did it. I had plenty of money anyway." He said he didn't know how much he took but couldn't repay more than $400,000. A Chicago banker and a policeman also are involved. (International)
